└ Stage of Litigation

The court granted defendant's motion to stay pending its petitions for inter partes review because the stage of the case, potential simplification of issues, and lack of undue prejudice favored a stay. "[T]he parties have not filed dispositive motions or initiated expert discovery and the Court has not held a claim construction hearing, all of which demonstrate that the case is still in its beginning stages. . . . The second factor weighs strongly in favor of a stay, given that IPR could result in invalidation or amendment of Plaintiff's claims. At the very least, continuing with the instant lawsuit while IPR proceeds risks inconsistent results. . . . Defendant promptly filed with the Court notices of IPR institution, and there is no evidence of gamesmanship on Defendant's part."

The court denied plaintiff's motion to lift the stay pending inter partes review because the lack of potential simplification of issues, undue prejudice, and stage of the case favored a continued stay. "[O]ne of the patents at issue in the instant action is still pending before the Federal Circuit. As a result, proceeding with the instant action would risk inconsistent results with the Federal Circuit and therefore weighs strongly against lifting the stay. . . . '[C]ourts have consistently found that a patent licensor cannot be prejudiced by a stay because monetary damages provide adequate redress for infringement.' . . . Plaintiff concedes that discovery remains outstanding and that the Court has not yet ruled on claim construction."
